PARVATI TEMPLE AT PUNE

Kalbhor pratishtha Dattat
History F.Y.B.A
S.G.K. College Loni
Kalbhor

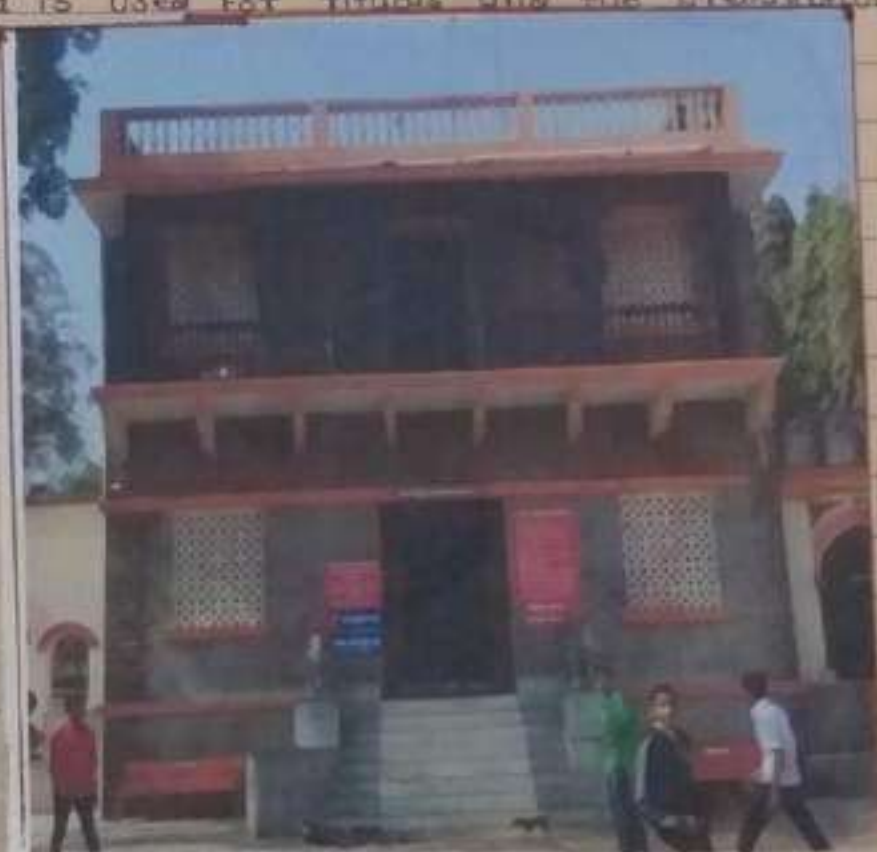

Pune and the 'Parvati' of Pune are well known all over the Maharashtra. The temple Complex of Paravati is located on a hill top and the surrounding area and steps which lead up to the temples stand out as a landmark in the skyline of the city. Interesting things come to light when one reviews the anecdotes associated with this splendid temple. It is believed that the deity 'Parvati Bhawani' manifests itself and cures its worshippers of their ailments. Many such accounts are available in history. It is believed, that the mother of Nallogi Tavra Patil was cured of her ailment because of her devotion and worship of the Goddess 'Parvati Bhawani'. Later on, the Nanasaheb Peshwa's mother also had a similar experience. The Peshwa therefore Constructed this temple. The traditional deity of the peshwa dynasty 'Shambhu Mahadev' or Devashwar is located in the main temple. At the four corners of this temple are located the smaller temples of Surya, Ganapati, Bhawanidevi and Vishnu. The idol of the Goddess 'Parvati' is located in the temple of the Goddess Bhawani also known as Ashtabhujia Devi. This whole construction took place in about 1749 A.D.

Some temples have a great cultural importance and a lot of history behind them. The Parvati temple of Pune has a long history as well. The Parvati like Pune also bears a close relationship with the rise and fall of the Peshwas. In 1755 A.D. Nanasaheb built his house on Parvati. Even today, this Wada is used for rituals and the preparation of puja.

Apart from this, Raghobadada built the temple of Kartika Swami. That he amongst all the Peshwas built the temple of war lord Kartikaya is a reflection of his martial spirit and great pride. The Vishnu temple was built by Nanasaheb around 1752 A.D., which completes the entire temple complex.

Looking at Parvati from an architectural point of view, it seems that this temple complex has been designed to be viewed from a distance. Because of its height over the surrounding area, this temple complex was also used to keep a watch over the city of Pune and its surrounding area. The last Bajirao Peshwa viewed the progress of the battle with the British at Khadki, from window in the cloisters of this

This temple Complex was established with a view to promote physical fitness, and even today hundreds of people take advantage of the physical exercise by climbing up the big zig zag steps reaching all the way to the top of the temple. The height of Parvati is approximately 90 metres. 108 large and winding steps lead to the temple complex. The 'Ramana Ganapati' is situated at the foot of Parvati. During the reign of the Peshwas a lot of importance and encouragement was given to scholars, and to education as a whole and a large open area was reserved for this purpose near the 'Ramana Ganapati'. In the month of August-September, a large Congregation of learned scholars from all over India used to assemble here.

- This was known as 'Ramana' Astralogers. Learned poets, Veda Scholars, philosophers, and doctors used to come to pune and were honoured according to their merit.

Today, we have large number of educational institutions, and a separate Department of Education. In the time of the Maratha kingdom, no such separate educational institutions existed. The residences of scholars were the schools in those days. The Peshwas used to give some financial assistance to these scholars, which was used in imparting knowled to the students. The Complex of the 'Ramana Ganapati' Consisted of many Dharmashalas. Today except for a few ruins and the temple of 'Ramana Ganapti' nothing survives.

As we start climbing the steps, we come across the 'Sati Gomaathi' or a monument of sati on the 32nd step. On the 48th step we come across the Gymnasium and the place where there used to be an armoury for guns. There were Cannons here upto the year 1875. A.D. Later on fearing the great Freedom Fighter Vasudeo Balwant Phadke the British removed them.

After this, we come across the 'Bhadyalkhana' where an accurate time used to be kept. Beyond the 'Bhadyalkhana' comes the Nagarkhana. The building of this Nagarkhana remained in existence upto 1870. Now a new management, which is making hasty and wrong changes has removed the building of the Nagarkhana. The design and orientation of this temple is such that the sun's rays at sunrise on 23rd March and 23rd September (days & nights are of equal duration on these days) used to pass through the windows of the Nagar-khand and fall directly on the body of the idol.

The temple of Devadeveshwara, is surrounded by a two storey high octagonal fortification. Balconies project from the second floor. A store room was constructed while laying the foundations of this building. It is believed that foundations of this room to the 'shenwar wada' though no evidence of this has been yet found. The Northern side consists of a three storeyed fortification. The ground floor of this fortification is formed of an arcade.

To the East is the Gokha or Gawaaksha. It is a terrace like structure with three windows. Music used to be played from this spot at the time of the poga. In front of this there is a fortified stairway, which leads to the peshwe wada. Four staircases lead to the top of the Fortification wall.

Sculptures of two Dwarapalas done in the Chalukyan style, are placed on both sides of the entrance to the Devadeveshwara temple. These sculptures are placed in two chhatris and are made of cement, and these are most incongruous being of a much earlier style. The temple belongs to the 18th Century whereas the
